INSTITUTE.

CONSULTATION, IN ALL CASES, FREE
CURES GUARANTEED, OR NO PAY REQUIRED
IN ALL CASES WHERE CONFIDENCE IS REQUIRED THE UTMOST SECRECY MAINTAINED.

The above rules, established Dr. J. C. Young in 1850, which have done so much sure the reputation of this stitute, are still adhered to, rding those in need of dical aid, the certainty of e and the utmost confidence. There is nothing of so great portance to the sick as to ow where to find a physin whose skill and humanity e an earnest of proper and icate treatment. The Doctor would respectfully call the ention of those of both sexes o are suffering or in trouble the invariable success that marked the career of the stitute in the seventeen years its existence.

It is unnecessary in this connection to enumerate all the plaints treated at the Institute, but the Doctor feels it duty to call especial attention to that terrible scourge, SEMINAL WEAKNESS, that is sapping with its in as the very life of its in the treatment and which the Institute has so enviable a reputation

THESE WHEELS, UNEQUALLED AND UNRIVALLED in the United States or the world have been fully tested on this coast, many being in use at this late, driving all kinds of machinery, Saw Mills, Flour Mills, Quartz Mills Woolen Factories, &c. &c.

CAUTION.

To all whom it may concern: I hereby give notice that the so-called Shipley's Pacific Turbine Water Wheel is a direct infringement and copy of the James Leffel's American Double Turbine Water Wheel and its manufacture and use is hereby prohibited. Any person or persons making using, constructing or vending said Water Wheels make themselves liable to heavy damages and penalties. Parties interested will take notice, for I shall prosecute said infringements to the utmost extent of the law.

That all may know I mean what I say and am not playing bluff, I give the following extract from a legal opinion on this subject from one of the most eminent Patent Attorneys in the United States.

WASHINGTON, D C, April 17, 1868.

MR A MYERS—In accordance with your request, we have examined the patents of Shipley on Water Wheels and are clearly of the opinion that they both infringe the Leffel's patents. In both of Shipley's Wheels he uses the upper and lower tiers of buckets precisely as Leffel does, and in this he clearly infringes. The fact that Shipley has applied another series of buckets in addition to those used by Leffel, does not relieve him from the consequences of infringement at all. He has no right to use those two tier of buckets, whether alone or with a third or any other number of tiers added. It is a clear infringement. Respectfully yours
DODGE & MUNN

I hereby give notice that I will prosecute every infringement on our Patents, whether it is the maker user buyer or seller. Every infringement, whether our claims are used in whole or in part, will be prosecuted.

The Presidential Election

ENGLISH VIEWS OF THE NOMINATIONS OF THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

[From the London Daily News June 4th]

* * There are some circumstances which render the nomination of General Grant singularly opportune. He is not a politician and the nation is tired of politicians. He is a soldier with a soldier's ideas of duty but with a civilian's respect for legislative authority and the national will. He has probably no definite policy of his own but he is not a President with a policy that the Republic is suffering. He is accustomed to obey as well as to rule, and it is a President who will do its work and obey its behests whom the nation needs. The very fact that after exciting the suspicion he has won the confidence of all parties proves his fitness for the highest post in the Commonwealth. A President should be a practical statesman, not a theorist—a man of deeds rather than of words, the executive of the national will, not the apostle of his own self will. He has no gift to a party which is not the policy of the nation and in his office he belongs neither to his party nor to himself but to the nation which has elected him to its temporary headship. It is the best recommendation of General Grant that he will probably make a national rather than a party President, and should his election once more lift the office ever so little above the self assertion of Mr Johnson's administration or the party narrowness of so many of his predecessors it may restore the waning influence of the Presidency and begin an era of peace and reconciliation in the nation.

It is curious to observe the irresistible advance of General Grant to the position he now occupies. Ever since Mr Lincoln's death he has been spoken of for the next President, but he has never, in any way put himself forward for nomination. Instead of canvassing for himself as so many of his predecessors have done he has refused even to submit to examination. His habit of reticence has been a puzzle to the politicians and an immense affliction to the correspondents of party journals. He was misunderstood during the war and would not explain himself; he has been more misunderstood since the peace, and has left the explanation to events. All parties in turn have claimed him and all parties have spoken of him as their Presidential candidate. In the autumn of 1866 Mr. Johnson paraded him as his champion in the celebrated North western tour. In the autumn of last year when the first guns of the electoral struggle began to be heard, he was nominated by the party which supported Mr Johnson's policy and was paraded by them as the people's candidate. He was supposed to be neither one thing nor the other, neither for Congress nor the President, neither for the North nor the South, neither for negro franchise nor for unconditional reconstruction, but only for peace as quickly as possible. Reconstruction at any price was supposed to be his motto, and the advocates of hastily patching up the Union regarded him as their coming man. Meanwhile the Republicans who were talking of Mr Chase, Mr Wade and Mr Colfax were lukewarm about Gen. Grant. He would not be put through his catechism, he would not commit himself to anything but practical duty, and they were as willing to suspect his silence as the Democrats were willing to trust it. But it was not the first service Mr Johnson rendered the Republican party when he put General Grant's loyalty to Congress to a practical test. As the General would not declare against his policy, Mr Johnson tried to use him to carry it out, and thus forced the declaration which neither private friends nor public appeals had been able to draw forth. From that time General Grant has more and more regained the confidence of the Republican party, and has only lost that of the Johnsonites and Democrats. Circumstances have, in fact, forced him upon the Republican party, and have rendered his unanimous nomination as their candidate their only course. But that nomination is another proof of the ascendency of the moderate section over the extreme Radicals, of which so many examples have been given. General Grant is the representative of the most moderate section of the Republican party, and his unanimous acceptance as the candidate of the whole party is a proof of its restored harmony, and a guarantee of its success. He will probably be elected by a vote in which all the States will share, for the first time since Mr. Lincoln's first election, and will be the first Republican President who will preside over an undivided Union.

An Interview with Judge Chase.

A correspondent, for whom the Brooklyn Union vouches, writes to that journal from Washington:

Soon after the Chicago Convention, I had occasion to call upon the Chief Justice. Immediately upon entering the room I was struck with his strange manner, and the unusual aspect of countenance with which he had been accustomed to greet me. That dignified composure, the blandness and serenity which ever rested so gracefully upon his manly presence, was gone. Nervous, excited, almost pettish, I hesitated making the occasion of my visit known, and I should more hesitate now had not his subsequent course given full warrant to the expression of private interviews. When a great man fails us—when the nation's representative separates himself from his friends they have a right to know fully and exactly why. That is just to him and fair to them.

During the interview allusion was very naturally made to the Chicago nomination, in the result of which he expressed himself as having no interest. He had been a Republican once, but they had gone away from their principles, and had read him out of the party. It had got new leaders, men who opposed it while he himself was struggling for its organization. He had done more for the party than a regiment of men who had read him out of the party. They had taken the reins into their own hands and now it mattered not to him what they did."

Seeing the direction in which his remarks were drifting, and wishing to avert the plunge down that precipice, I interrupted abruptly, "But Chief Justice Chase can never be anything but a Republican."

"I am not a Republican," he said coldly, and then, qualifying added, "I am not a partisan at all. I was a Democrat in my younger days. I was elected to the United States Senate as a Democrat with anti-slavery, abolition principles."

Still wishing to draw him back, I remarked, "You had many friends who would have supported you had you received the nomination at Chicago." To which he replied, "Yes, I know I had, but they have read me out of the party and have chosen another leader."

Again interrupting, being determined to force him to adhesion to the great party of progress and freedom I said, earnestly, "But you will not go to the Democrats; you can never act with that party as now organized, never certainly with the present animus—its hatred of the negro, its denunciation of reconstruction, its opposition to all great and good moral measures. You, honored sir, could never find home feeling and sympathy there. You could never become a co-worker with your life-long political enemies—men who hold nothing in common with you. Most assuredly you could never consent to become the Democratic candidate for the Presidency."

Without manifesting any unwillingness to continue the conversation, he seemed throughout nervous and fidgety. His countenance had not that cheerful genial smile upon it that used to play so gracefully over the face of the model American statesman. He turned over file after file and seemed disconcerted, as though he had a poor case and had failed to make his point. Taking up a paper from one side of his table and laying it down upon the other he said straightly:

"If they would accept of my principles as their platform I would—I shall not give up my doctrine of equal rights. They must take that. I shall hold to the reconstruction measures; they are right and constitutional. I drew up the bill—the second one—though I did not have in the military. I would have managed the affairs with civilian officers and called the military as they were needed. If I could get them to endorse these principles, that would settle them forever."

A correspondent denies upon good authority the statement going the round of the papers that the great American philanthropist "left the Pope £200,000 on quitting Rome." The Italian papers report more accurately "a gift of $10,000 for one of the educational institutions in Rome, by George Peabody."

Direct Trade for Oregon.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

SIR: In the OREGONIAN of the 27th inst. you give some facts and figures in relation to ship building on the Columbia and Willamette rivers. I propose to notice those figures from a different stand point. You have demonstrated the [illegible] profit to the ship builder. But why send your ships to San Francisco? We are certainly now paying a sufficient tribute to that city, and it should be the object of every well-wisher of Oregon to establish direct trade with the [illegible] of our surplus produce. This $5 00 per ton, the basis of your calculation, might just as well as not be saved to the producer, the San Francisco charges fully compensating for the difference in time occupied in reaching the destination of the cargo from the Columbia river and from the Bay, thus giving, if in wheat, 15 cents per bushel to the producer. Our entire profits for the year seldom reach that amount.

But again, let us see at what [illegible] can be carried, allowing fair interest and [illegible] on money invested. I use your figures:

Wages and provisions of crew, 12 months	[illegible]
Insurance	[illegible]
Pilotage and towage, 2 trips	[illegible]
Wear	[illegible]
Compound interest on above	[illegible]
Interest on cost of ship	[illegible]
Profit and 10 per cent of cost of ship and [illegible] expense above [illegible]	[illegible]
Total, one year	[illegible]

Two trips per annum to New York or to foreign port, 600 tons each way, 1,200 tons in all, making in round numbers, $7 per ton net, [illegible] 70 cents per bbl for flour, and 21 cents per bushel for wheat, with equally low [illegible] freight. At such rates we could [illegible] remunerative price for our wheat. But with the present shiftless management in shipping, [illegible] to the enormous profits of the [illegible] men it is only in times of scarcity in foreign or Eastern markets that the Oregon [illegible] get a living price for their labor. It is [illegible] the productions of the farm that all [illegible] depend for prosperity. [illegible] we concede your support, but we ask that you do not fritter away our substance, and that you divide with us the profits of our labor.

Yours, FARMER

An Independent Trade for Oregon

That the prosperity of the mercantile class of Oregon, and especially of Portland, depends largely on the general prosperity of the State is a fact which, though as patent as any other self-evident truth, seems nevertheless to be too little appreciated. Agriculture is the employment of by far the larger class of our people, and our merchants find their profits in the prosperity of the cultivators of the soil. The larger the profits of the farmer the better the general business of the State. The mercantile class would then consult their own interests as well as the interests of the whole State by lending their assistance to any enterprise which will give farmers better prices for the products of the soil.

These remarks are made in view of the proposition made by A. S. Mercer, in connection with responsible parties in New York, to build up a direct trade between that city and Oregon. We want shipping here to carry away our home products and thus render our markets more certain and more profitable to producers—the class upon whom the prosperity of the State mainly depends. If merchants will ship direct to this place, instead of through San Francisco, we shall soon have such a market. Vessels bringing cargoes here can load for any part of the world and the delay and expense of re-shipment at San Francisco may be avoided. The farming class will get the benefit of the increased prices of their products, and merchants, by aiding to build up the enterprise and fostering an independent trade for the State, will gain largely by the increased demand for goods and the ability of the people to pay for them.

At present the business of Oregon is crippled and greatly retarded by the tariff which is paid on our exports as freights to San Francisco. For their wheat our farmers receive about fifty cents per bushel less than the farmers of California,—a difference which in many cases amounts to more than the entire profits of wheat raising in Oregon. This disadvantage is severely felt by all classes in this State. It affects both the merchant and the farmer, since the latter is thereby rendered less able to buy what the former has to sell. The prosperity and improvement of the State is thus incalculably retarded. If the great staples of agriculture would command at Portland the price, or something near the price, which they command at San Francisco, [illegible] here would soon increase four fold. More land would be cultivated, [illegible] houses and barns built, more mills erected, more manufacturing establishments put in operation, and even the railroads which are now soliciting aid from the people could be built without delay.

Nothing else would contribute so much to the accomplishment of all these results as a line of vessels trading directly and regularly with Oregon. Landing their cargoes here, they could load with our products and sail for any market. Oregon wheat would not then be compelled to wait for the movement of California crops before it could go forward. The cost of shipping from Portland would be somewhat, though little, greater than the cost of shipping from San Francisco, and the great margin of profits which is now absorbed by middle-men would be saved to our State. It is a narrow-sighted policy which declines to render aid to an enterprise which will certainly bring about such desirable results. Our career of prosperity as a State will never be fairly opened until such a system is inaugurated. Every effort to inaugurate it should receive liberal encouragement from the mercantile class, those upon whom its success mainly depends. Give a vessel a cargo for Portland, and she can easily obtain a cargo to carry away. But if some enterprise of this sort is not built up at once, the probabilities are that we shall find no markets for the coming harvest. Everything indicates that the foreign demand will not be so great as it was last year. If this turns out to be the case, Oregon cannot afford to ship through San Francisco, and the heavy crops now in prospect will be of little value to the State. "Hard times" will surely ensue if our farm products cannot find a market.

"Conservative Soldiers."

The Convention of "Conservative Soldiers and Sailors" in session at New York in connection with the Copperhead National Convention, presents a marked contrast to the great gathering of Union soldiers at Chicago in May. The idea of a Soldiers' Convention, held for the purpose of co-operating with the "Democratic" party is supremely ridiculous. And a ridiculous spectacle they are making of it. They do not represent one in fifty of the men who put down the rebellion. As for the Generals who are prominent in this "Conservative" movement, they were quite too "Conservative" during the war for the country's good. Unless Hancock was present there was not one who gained any credit for actual service. McClernand was temporary Chairman. While in the army he was so "Conservative" as to be strongly suspected of disloyalty. In the Vicksburg campaign Grant wrote to Halleck "Gen McClernand is entirely unfit for the position of corps commander. Looking after his corps gives me more labor and infinitely more uneasiness than all the remainder of my department." A short time after this letter was written, Grant received official communications from both Sherman and McPherson, inclosing an order which McClernand had issued to his corps and which was full of the meanest insinuations against other high officers in the army. Sherman and McPherson condemned the order in the strongest and most indignant language, and did not hesitate to brand it as "false." McClernand had become unendurable, and Grant sent him home to Illinois in disgrace and filled his place with a better man. Another prominent individual in this Convention of "Conservative Soldiers" was Gen Franklin. He also was a complete failure in the service wherever he was tried. He was one of the McClellan clique during the early part of the war, and was a very fit associate of Fitz John Porter. These men all fell out of active service long before the close of the struggle. Better men were advanced to the positions they held. It is altogether fit that these so called Conservative officers should associate with the Democratic party. Half hearted during the war and their loyalty continually suspected, they are the very men now for the "Democracy." But the true soldiers of the Union, from the highest in command to the lowest in the ranks, are heartily with the Republican party. What names can be presented to compare with Grant and Sherman, Thomas and Sheridan, Meade and Logan, Howard and Geary and the hosts of others who remain true to the principles for which they fought and who believe in securing the results of the victory which the valor of loyal soldiers achieved? Democratic or Conservative soldiers! Pah! Look among Lee's surrendered rebels for them.

The New York Convention passes a resolution approving Johnson's last amnesty proclamation. This action by the Convention is merely expressive of the joy of "General" Forrest and other delegates at the escape from the gallows.

If Chase is nominated at New York and elected President a first class funeral may be expected shortly after March 4th 1869 followed by the inauguration of a rebel Vice President to fill an important vacancy.

The Copperhead papers are busy counting up the number of men Grant lost in taking Richmond. After they get through with this computation will they not address their mathematical talents to the work of estimating the number of men sacrificed by McClellan in not taking the rebel Capital?

A H H Stuart of Virginia, rebel ex Congressman, writes to a Copperhead friend in Illinois that "Pendleton's views on currency and finance will be acceptable to the South,"—that is, to the Southern rebels. Unnecessary to make this declaration. Nobody doubts it.

The latest definitions of egotism are "I hood" and "Ile ness." We commend these terms to Beriah. They would give his vocabulary of egotism a little more variety than it has at present.

STATE ITEMS.

Brick are made at Corvallis for $8 per thousand.

The stage from Portland to Eugene now arrives at the latter place at midnight. Time twenty one hours.

The railroad canvassers are having a brisk competition in Benton county. Both sides are to have a "grand rally" at Corvallis on Saturday next.

The third session of the Benton county Teacher's Institute will be held at Philomath, commencing July 10th, 1868, at 10 o'clock A M, and continue two days.

A Eugene paper says: A great many people in our city have been taken sick with the measles for the past few weeks. Instead of abating we hear of new cases every day.

Says the Roseburg paper: W W Green, of Colusa county, California, left this place last Wednesday with eighteen head of the finest horses that have ever been driven from Southern Oregon. Most of his horses were bought for the San Francisco market for draying, buggy teams and sporting purposes.

The Corvallis Gazette says: Messrs Moore & Sinclair, are preparing to put up grain elevators in their warehouse at the steamboat landing. This will be a great convenience in storing and shipping grain. Messrs W B & J F Hamilton are also improving their warehouse in this city. They are placing under it new foundations and also a basement story. The grain will be taken, by elevators, from the wagons to bins, and from thence to the basement for sacking and shipping. They are prepared to store from 50,000 to 60,000 bushels of grain. This looks like preparations for an abundant harvest.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Further details of the recent terrible tragedy at Oakland wharf are as follows: About 100 or 150 persons were precipitated into the water. Ten bodies have been recovered up to this date namely Mrs E S Saunders, aged 24, married; Julia Whelan, aged about 20, domestic in the employ of W H L Barnes; Catharine Mullen, aged 21, nurse in the employ of W H L Barnes; Albert Haywood aged 17 years; Wife of W. B Haywood, age unknown; Maria Camaino, aged 23 years, a native of Italy; Alessio Ferrero, aged 40 years, Secretary of the Garibaldi Society; A Bartiella, aged 27 years, a native of Italy; Cora Harrison, daughter of Mr. Harrison, 7th street, aged 3 years; Carlo, aged about 31 years, an Italian employed as salesman by D Chirardelli.

No one can tell how many are yet missing. The following are known to have been seen at the wharf: Rosa, daughter of Mrs Camaino, known to have been drowned, body not recovered. Two little daughters of the brave Terrer missing.

The search for the missing bodies is still being prosecuted. Too much honor cannot be awarded to the brave fellows who jumped into the water and helped to save those who were unable to assist themselves. Among the number were the two Italians, Ferrero and Caslo, who after saving lives of nearly a dozen persons were themselves drowned. Their remains lay in state at the armory of the Garibaldians until to-day, when the funeral took place with most solemn and imposing ceremonies. The procession was composed of the Garibaldians as an escort and about 500 citizens, principally Italians, on foot, followed by 100 or more carriages, forming in all in procession, fully one mile in length.

The store of Mr Abrahamson, on Second street, was entered by burglars last night. His brother was knocked down and the till robbed of $250.

Detective Johnson has just returned from Petaluma with Edwin Bogart, a stagedriver, in custody accused of robbing Wells, Fargo & Co of $670 at different times, while carrying the express over the line.

The Produce exchange inaugurated their new rooms to day by a collation, speeches, etc. Tables were spread for 200 persons. There was a large attendance, including all the leading grain shippers. The Produce Exchange has been in existence one year and is in highly flourishing condition.

Madame Parepa Rosa is rapidly recovering from her late severe illness, and will sing again at Platt's Hall on Friday evening next.

Upon removing the lid covering the glass, the face of the illustrious Senator was found to be in a remarkable state of preservation, almost as natural as when buried seven years ago. The complexion is very fair, the contour of the head and face apparently unchanged, and the expression quite natural and plainly recognizable. The hair looks as black and glossy as ever, and the raiment as new and tidy as when first put on, not presenting the least evidence of mildew or discoloration.

DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

DATES TO JULY 6

The New York Convention.

NEW YORK, July 4.—The National Democratic Convention has assembled at Tammany Hall which is handsomely decorated for the occasion with large American flags, etc, and elaborate painted escutcheons of all the States. The accommodations for the delegates are ample and there are excellent arrangements for the press. The hall and galleries are densely crowded.

At twenty minutes past twelve August Belmont called the Convention to order. He spoke at some length, denouncing the policy and character of the dominant party and concluded by nominating for temporary Chairman, Henry W Palmer, of Wisconsin, which was agreed to. Palmer took the Chair amid applause and briefly returned thanks for the honor.

Prayer was offered by the Rev Dr Morgan, Rector of St Thomas Church. After considerable discussion the rules of the House of Representatives were adopted for the government of the Convention.

Several motions were made in regard to the appointment of Committees on permanent organization and credentials.

A motion to allow the Territories to be represented in both committees was lost 106 to 184.

A motion was finally passed allowing States only to be represented on these committees, which were thereupon appointed.

California is represented in the Committee on Credentials by W Jacoby, and Committee on Permanent Organization by A H Rose.

A Committee on Resolutions was subsequently appointed. California being represented by J Steele.

A resolution was adopted instructing two of the former Committees to report at seven this evening.

A motion was adopted that all resolutions offered shall be referred to the Committee on Resolutions without debate.

It was ordered that the Committee on Organization be instructed to report rules for the government of the Convention.

Brooks, on behalf the New York delegation moved to reconsider the resolution for a meeting to night. He urged extreme heat and also the fact that the city of New York had arranged for an appropriate celebration of the day and hoped the Convention would participate. After considerable discussion the motion to reconsider prevailed and the Convention adjourned to 10 o'clock, the Secretary having first read the Declaration of Independence by a vote of the Convention.

CHICAGO July 5.—Specials from New York say that in the committee on permanent organization, one half the States voted for Horatio Seymour for Permanent Chairman. Mr McDonald was nominated by the Western men against him, and got 15 votes, Gov Bigler of Pennsylvania, 3 and therefore Seymour will be the Permanent Chairman. The Pendleton men complain bitterly of partiality shown in the distribution of tickets by which Tammany Hall is filled with New York local politicians, and the Pendleton escort got no show.

A Tribune special strongly denies the truth of the report that Chase has written a letter pledging himself in any event to support the nominee of the Convention. Chase freely says that if the Convention adopts his principles, including the recognition of existing reconstruction at the South, negro suffrage, and honesty in the payment of the national debt, he would support the nominee.

Draft of the Copperhead Platform.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The committee on Resolutions met last night and the following platform was presented by Henry E Murphy, which has the approval of Gov Seymour and the New York delegation, and is regarded as certain of adoption.

The Democratic party in National Convention assembled, standing as ever by the Constitution of the Government as a guarantee of the liberties of the citizen, and recognizing as the consequences of the late civil war the extinction of slavery and of the heresy of secession, with the return of peace we demand, first, the restoration of all the States to their rights in the Union, and the restoration of civil government to American people.

2d Amnesty for all political offences. Regulation of the elective franchise in the States by their citizens.

3d Payment of national obligations in strict accordance with the terms.

4th Taxation of Government bonds to the same extent as other property is taxed.

5th One currency for the Government and the people, the laborer, the office holder, the pensioner and the bondholder.

6th Economy in the administration of the Government, reduction of the standing army and navy, abolition of the Freedmen's Bureau and all political instrumentalities designed to secure negro supremacy, simplification of the revenue system and discontinuance of inquisitorial modes of assessing and collecting internal revenues so that the burdens of taxation may be equalized and lessened, the credit of the Government increased, currency made good and the national debt funded at a lower rate of interest.

7th Reform in abuses in the administration, expulsion of corrupt men from office, reservation of public lands for homes for working people, restoration of rightful authority and independence to the Executive and Judiciary and the subordination of the military to civil rule to the end that the usurpation of Congress and the despotism of the sword may cease.

8th Equal rights and protection for naturalized and native born citizens at home and abroad and an assertion of American nationality which shall command the respect of foreign powers and furnish example and encouragement to people struggling for national integrity and constitutional liberty.

Seperate resolutions are devoted to thanks to to the soldiers and to President Johnson.

Fears were expressed yesterday by the anti Pendleton men that the Southern delegates would be persuaded to vote solid for Pendleton, thus securing his nomination. Without Southern support Pendleton will have about 110 votes though his friends claim more.

Hendricks of Indiana, is the second choice of a majority of the delegates.

The New York delegation has agreed to support Sanford E Church for President.

Latest Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The Convention was called to order about 11 o'clock. Gen. Morgan of Ohio moved that the delegation from the working men's convention be entitled to seats on the floor. The motion was adopted.

Mr Chambers of Pennsylvania, from the committee on Permanent Organization, reported Horatio Seymour for permanent Chairman, and one Vice President and Secretary from each State and also recommended that rules be adopted.

Mr Seymour was escorted to the chair amid applause. He returned thanks and counseled moderation and harmony. He said the most important questions would be forced on the consideration of this Convention. Some would be forced on it by the resolutions of the late Chicago Convention. He discussed briefly the Republican platform and accused that party of violating its own declarations against repudiation and unequal taxation. He then expressed solicitude for the soldiers and sailors, their indorsers and widows and orphans. He accused the now dominant party of extravagant waste of public moneys, with tainting the national credit, impeding emigration by overwhelming the laborer with taxation and breaking the guarantee of republican liberty. He denied the assertion of the Republican Convention that the principles of the Declaration of Independence were sacred now on every inch of American soil, for in ten States of the Union, military power suppresses civil law. Gov. Seymour closed his address amid great cheering.

Tilden offered a resolution which was adopted admitting delegates from the territories to honorary seats in the Convention.

A large number of resolutions were presented and referred, including one to the effect that the thanks of the nation are due Chief Justice Chase for his ability and impartiality in presiding over the Court of Impeachment.

Also a resolution in favor of an increase of pay to soldiers and sailors by paying gold or its equivalent.

A letter was received from Susan B Anthony with great laughter, urging the claim of women to participate in elections.

A resolution was adopted that no steps be taken towards nominating a candidate until after the platform is adopted. The vote on the resolution was taken by States.

A Confederate Declaration of Independence.

CHICAGO July 4.—The President's Amnesty Proclamation is as follows, omitting numerous whereases: "Now, therefore, be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States do by virtue of the Constitution and in the name of the people of the United States, hereby proclaim that unconditionally and without reservation to all and every person who directly or indirectly participated in the late insurrection or rebellion, excepting such person or persons as may be under presentment or indictment in the United States Courts having competent jurisdiction upon charges of treason or other felony, full pardon and amnesty for the offence of treason against the United States or adhering to their enemies during the late civil war with the restoration of all rights except as to slaves, and except also, as to any property of which any person may have been legally divested under the laws of the United States." The proclamation is dated July 4.

Copper-Johnson Soldier's Convention.

NEW YORK, July 4.—The Soldiers and Sailors Convention will meet in the large hall of Cooper Institute. Gen McClernand of Illinois is elected temporary Chairman.

A Committee on Permanent Organization was appointed which reported Gen W B Franklin for permanent Chairman and a long list of Vice Presidents and Secretaries. Gen. Franklin was elected to the chair amid immense cheering and made a few appropriate remarks.

North Carolina Coming In.

WASHINGTON July 4.—Gov Canby telegraphs to Gen Grant that the North Carolina Legislature ratified the Constitutional amendment to day.

The following instructions were sent to the commanding officer of that State: "You will abstain from the exercise of any authority under the reconstruction acts except so far as may be necessary to clear up all unfinished business. You will not interfere in civil matters unless the execution of the laws should be obstructed by unlawful or forcible opposition to the inauguration of the new State government."

From the Plains.

CHICAGO, July 5.—A Fort Bridger dispatch says that about 2,000 Shoshones and Bannock Indians had a council with Gen Augur June 20th. The result is unknown. The removal of troops from Fort Smith, Phil Kearney and Reno progress rapidly.

South America.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The Ocean Queen brings Panama advices to the 27th June.

The United States ship [illegible] arrived at Aspinwall on the 21st. The [illegible] had also arrived at Aspinwall.

The Chilean Congress is in session. The President's message expresses a disbelief of any renewal of hostilities with Spain, and so far as Chile is concerned peace seemed certain.

Yellow fever has diminished at Lima and entirely disappeared from Callao. The total deaths by the disease amount to ten thousand. The English and French Vice Consuls are among the victims.

Rumors are afloat of an approaching revolution and several persons have been arrested.

Two severe shocks of an earthquake were felt in Northern Ecuador June 17th. Much property was destroyed. Five persons were buried in the ruins.

THE BEST CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Is to wear good Undershirts and good Cassimere Suits and should it be warm change your heavy clothes for such as suit the weather. Follow that prescription, and you will never suffer with rheumatism, but be certain to buy your clothes of KOHN & FISHEL for theirs are known to cure either cold or heat and to suit both rich and poor.

"There's Nothing Half so Sweet in Life" as good health and good spirits and if you have them not, the next best thing is what will restore bloom to the faded cheek and happiness to the drooping heart. The great and sure remedy, or panacea, is

Which our physicians recommend to both male and female patients as a safe reliable agreeable and cordial stimulant. It contains nothing to disagree with the most delicate constitution and has won golden opinions from all who have tried them. The best Tonic and Nerve Restorer known is

WORK FOR THE STREET [illegible] sweep clean according to the old saying It is to be hoped that the new Street Commissioner will not be the exception to the general rule If he is to get an eye for dirt, and a disposition to keep it out he can scarcely fail to find employment for himself and all his available means for the next seven weeks in ridding the streets of filth garbage at a thousand and one varieties of obstructions The latter might be got along with perhaps with a few grumblings, as wood piles lumber yards and whiskey saloons retail stores in the public highways, endanger the lives only of those who pass them too heedlessly; but the garbage and filth and cess pools that abound everywhere are working every day mischief to the health of hundreds of people who have power to guard themselves from the poison It is a Street Commissioner will take the trouble to examine the precincts under his direct control he will be astonished at the number of evils which call for correction And now that but one man has really come the responsibility for the health of the city rests with full weight upon his shoulders He may permit the streets to remain in the present horribly filthy condition to breed pestilence and death or he may enforce the sanitary laws we have and measurably relieve the community from the peculiar dangers of the hot season As it now the atmosphere is sufficiently exhaled from decaying matter in the streets to kill a tenth of the population were it not that the kind breezes of Heaven sweep away portions of the [illegible] Under any and all favoring circumstances, [illegible] suffer the penalty of even breathing, till the [illegible] broom shall have done a vast deal of sweeping

While on this subject we will call the attention of the police to the necessity of enforcing the laws respecting nuisances about private dwellings There are hundreds of places where garbage is thrown out and wetted down with waste water the mass allowed to rot and stink till the place is as pestilent as a charnel house Particular attention should be given to the city front now that the waters of the river are receding and about to leave the wharves uncovered All along the front they are made the places of deposit for all manner of filth from the city as well as for much that is floated on by the current and left to decay, ferment and steam for the poisonous vapors There is no fiction about this matter and the importance of a thorough course of cleansing for the streets [illegible] and many of the private premises of the city cannot be over-stated or too urgently stated We have evidence only too positive, that deaths have already occurred from breathing the poison exhaled from decaying matter In the last issue of the Advocate we find a statement of this kind from W H Watkins, from which we take the following extract

A lady, in the country who had been very ill for a month, but who was recovering perceptibly every day, took lodgings in town In a few days she was taken with a violent chill, followed by great nervous prostration, delirium, and attended by a profuse diarrhœa, terminating in death in about sixty hours The same day of her death I was called to see a child two and a half years old at the same place who was attacked with a severe chill—had violent convulsions diarrhœa and which terminated in death in less than three days About twenty four hours after this child was taken ill I was called to a second child taken in precisely the same manner, and which was followed with a like result When the first child was taken sick I said to the family that the symptoms of the lady who had died and the child, then sick resembled poisoning from some old cess pool and asked if there was anything of the kind around the premises but was informed there was not When the second child was taken sick I insisted on examining the premises, and found, partly under the house, (the building having been moved to its present location) an old privy, nearly full from which was exhaled an atmosphere noxious with ammonia and sulphuretted hydrogen That these persons came to an untimely grave from these poisonous exhalations I have not a question

There are dozens if not hundreds, of such places as that mentioned by Dr Watkins, scattered all over the city—every one sending forth the elements of disease and death. If it be not the business of the Street Commissioner, nor yet of the police it should be made the business of somebody without delay, to see that all such places, wherever found be reformed

U S DISTRICT COURT—DEADY, JUDGE.—The regular July term of the U S District Court was begun yesterday morning, and the following were the proceedings of the day

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS!
A Pure and Powerful Tonic,
Corrective and Alterative of wonderful efficacy in Diseases of the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS.
PROTECTIVE PROPERTIES.

Prevents Fever and Ague and Billious Remittent Fevers; Fortifies the System against Miasma and the evil effects of unwholesome water; invigorates the organs of digestion and the bowels

REMEDIAL PROPERTIES.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Sick and Nervous Headache, General Debility, Nervousness Depression of Spirits, Constipation Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Sea Sickness, Cramps and Spasms and all Complaints of either sex arising from Bodily Weakness, whether inherent in the system or PRODUCED BY SPECIAL CAUSES.

NOTHING THAT IS NOT WHOLESOME, GENIAL and restorative in its nature, enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind; no deadly botanical element no fiery excitant, but is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated, and the appetite restored by this Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of Dyspepsia and in less confirmed forms of Indigestion Acting as a gentle and painless aperient as well as upon the liver it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Low ness of Spirits and Fits of Languor find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters The testimony on this point is conclusive, and from both sexes.

As a Genuine Tonic HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from old age it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant When the powers of nature are relaxed It operates to re-enforce and re establish them

Last, but not least it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acrid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day

Disappearances

The sudden disappearance of individuals from the midst of society implies in almost every instance mental aberration or crime. Skeletons found in mines in caves, in disused wells, in quarries, in the walls of ruins, in pits, or in fields immediately beneath the surface of the soil, imply so many secret mysteries which probably occasioned in their day a while speculation, at most, and then agitated profoundly some small circle of relatives and friends. By some few such hidden things like the famous trials, many persons were urged into the perpetration of acts so little analogous to the general habits of the species that they are held to proceed from madness, though if all the circumstances of the case were known it might be found that they were based on reasonable, or at least on intelligible grounds. Every man may say with the poet

My mind to me a kingdom is because within that domain, whether limited or extensive, he bears absolute sway, his subjects being ideas which he can marshal and compel in this or that direction at pleasure; but when his ideas rise in rebellion and refuse to obey his will, the kingdom is converted into an anarchy, and the man from being the master becomes the slave of his own thoughts. In this state there is no knowing what he may or may not do. In nearly all conditions of mind men derive satisfaction from exciting astonishment and wonder among their neighbors and causing themselves to be talked or speculated about, since they thus become more acutely conscious of their own existence and believe themselves to be of some consequence in the world. No matter to such persons how this is brought about, whether the means be dignified or undignified, wise or foolish; one of our contemporaries to whom notoriety has been always as the breath of life, finding the public flag in its attention to his doings, forwarded to one of the journals in a feigned hand an account of his own death, that he might gratify his vanity by becoming for a few days the subject of general conversation and reading the eulogiums which he felt certain would be pronounced upon him. The plan succeeded only in part; people certainly did talk a great deal about him, but instead of the unmingled praises on which he had reckoned, he had the mortification to see himself severely censured and to discover that the general estimate of his abilities was considerably lower than that which he himself made of them.

About two hundred years ago, a literary man of some eminence, distinguished as a scholar and admired as a professor, who had visited the most remarkable seats of learning and schools of philosophy then in vogue, gave a shock to public opinion by vanishing, so to speak, in an instant. From his own country, Flanders, then disturbed by civil war, he had passed into France, where, as a professor of Greek, he enjoyed considerable distinction. Walking out one day while the streets of the town in which he lived were full of people, a gentleman standing at a door on the opposite of the road beckoned to him, and in the sight of many to whom he was known he crossed and entered the house. From that moment he was never again seen; his friends, his auditors, the magistrates, and other public authorities of the place made search and instituted all possible inquiries to no purpose.

"Moons rolled on moons away,
But Conrad comes not—came not since that day."

Whether the worthy professor was murdered in that house, or sported à la Spoke with public curiosity, or had committed some crime which rendered it advisable that he should disappear, or met his death by accident, or changed his name and went into a monastery, or ran away with some neighbor's wife—or in whatever other way we may account for it, such was the apparent end of Everhard Feith, whose name, however, will be long remembered by all lovers of Greek literature, by his learned and interesting Antiquitates Homericae.

There is a tradition—it may be nothing more—which attributes the disappearance of another learned man to a very different cause. It was not final, like that of Feith, but seems to have been sudden, and for a length of time complete. A young Oxford student, looking forward, it seems, to eminence in the church, and distinction as a theologian, vanished suddenly from among his friends, and the course he had taken defied at once all search and conjecture. Almost simultaneously with the departure of the Oxford scholar was the advent of a daring corsair on the Mediterranean, who swept the waves like a falcon, plundered ships of all nations, and piled up immense wealth in a small barren island, which he made his nest. Here he associated more or less freely with his followers, leaving them occasionally for the company of a lady whom he had made the partner of his wild life. When he had fulfilled the object for which he became a corsair, the lady having died, the rock was left untenanted, the pirates dispersed. Not long after, the student reappeared at his university, applied himself as before to study, and, entering the church, gradually rose to its highest honors, and died Archbishop of York.

About the year 1812, an officer of the Preventive Service, living with his wife and family at Margate, and known more or less familiarly to the whole town, went forth, as his duty required, to walk along the cliffs, and watch whatever appearances might present themselves on the sea. The month was November; the time of day about four in the afternoon; the weather wild and blusterous; he was in the heyday of life—his frame powerful, his health perfect, his condition of mind analogous to that of his body. With double-breasted coat buttoned up to his chin, and tight-fitting cap—with spyglass in hand, a pair of pistols in his pocket, and a heavy cutlass by his side, he moved westward along the downs, nodding and conversing with several persons as he sauntered along. Presently the night set in darksome and drizzly, with heavy gusts from the south, which, rolling in the big waves before them, dashed them in thunder against the cliffs. Out of the darkness of that terrible night the officer never emerged; all possible search was made for him or his body, but without effect; it was suspected, and the suspicion seemed reasonable, that he had fallen over the cliffs, and been washed out to sea; his wife and children lamented him; another officer was put into his place, and by degrees his disappearance ceased to be spoken of. Thirty years later, that is, in the summer of 1842—walking with one of my children along the downs, I saw a farmer plowing at a short distance beyond the flag staff, and stopped to talk with him on the subject of seaweed manure. While we were conversing, the man observed something glitter in the furrow he had just made; it was the button of a naval officer; this led to further examination; the earth was removed, and, little more than a foot beneath the surface, the skeleton of a man with several fragments of his dress was discovered. It was ascertained the uniform he had worn was that of the Preventive officers, and it seemed probable from various circumstances we had discovered the skeleton of the man who had disappeared in 1812.

Sometimes in moving about the world you come in contact with one end, so to speak, of a disappearance, while you occasionally witness the phenomena which accompany the other end. While in quarantine at Malta the plague broke out in the lazaretto three doors from my apartments, and one man, a traveler from the East, died. Scarcely was the breath out of his body ere preparations were made for his funeral; a coffin was improvised, placed on a small bier, and four guardiani, dressed in black and muffled, bore him hurriedly along the esplanade under my window to his long home. I took some pains to ascertain who he was, but without success; he had given no information to any one during his terrible illness, and his luggage contained no papers which could throw any light on his name, his circumstances, or his country. All therefore that could be said was that a man had disappeared from the earth, though he had doubtless friends somewhere who mourned his loss, which to them must always have remained a mystery.

Another instance, in some respects similar, I witnessed on the banks of the Nile. While moving southwards along the river, I saw on the sand close to the water the corpse of a man which had apparently just been washed ashore. That he had been murdered there could be no doubt, from the deep gash in the back of his head, where the skull had been broken in as if with an iron bar. He had been a man above the ordinary height, broad chested, with large limbs and athletic figure, probably about forty years of age. Two Arabs were engaged close at hand in digging a grave, for to them, as to the ancient Greeks, it is an act of piety to bury the chance dead whom they may find in their way. They judged, as we did, from appearances, that the body might have been eight or ten days in the water, floating downwards with the current, so that he was probably murdered high up in Middle Egypt. Wherever his home may have been, it was now desolate, and all those who had been his friends were lost in speculation respecting his destiny; all they knew was that he had left his home one certain day for business or pleasure, to take a walk or visit a relative, a certain thing, till all his doings and whereabouts never to be withdrawn.

Here in London almost every day presents us with social phenomena quite as startling, though somewhat different character. Men leave their homes to make a call upon a friend, and their absence proves eternal. Young ladies run away from their families, sometimes with Frenchmen, who may be known by the trick of lifting their nails; sometimes with Germans no less remarkable for their fondness for beer; sometimes with our own young countrymen, who often, however, desert their victims in the course of a few weeks, so that, if they think proper, they may return to their friends. In general, however, a much lighter comes to them, so that an act begun perhaps in thoughtless passion terminates in a life of shame or in suicide. Many years ago there happened in a family with which I am acquainted an incident belonging to the class of facts above described. A young lady about three and twenty, through no motive that could be divined except that of amatory caprice, left her father's house so secretly and suddenly that no trace of her movements could be discovered. It was not even known whether she went alone or in the company of a lover. Advertisements, placards offering a large reward, were had recourse to. The father, widely known and as widely respected, interested all his friends in prosecuting inquiries respecting the lost one, without avail. Year after year passed, and at length the truant might be almost said to be forgotten. More than forty years afterwards a brother of the lady, though not born when she disappeared, emigrated to Australia, and on arriving at Sydney had his name inserted in the journals in the list of passengers. One morning while sitting in his hotel at breakfast, he was informed that a lady below desired to speak with him. "Show her up," said John Bull, rather perplexed to conjecture who could wish to see him in that new world. When his visitor entered, he saw that she was old, though still in robust health. Instead of explaining her business, she asked whether he was the son of a gentleman whom she named, together with a locality in which he had resided in England. Upon being answered in the affirmative, she said, "Then I am your sister," and forthwith entered into a full account of her mysterious disappearance. She had not left her home alone, but with a lover inferior to her in rank, who had taken her to Australia, where he had set up a hotel and realized a fortune. It was the affair of the hotel, however, that had withheld her from communicating with her family, who might have regarded it as a degradation to live by industry. Her husband, however, was now dead, yet the hotel still retained its celebrity under the management of the lady, who, when she fled from her home, had not, at all events, fled to poverty.

A more striking example of these social phenomena is that of Agnes, daughter of James Ferguson, the machinist. While walking down the Strand with her father, she slipped her arm out of his while he was lost in thought, and he never saw her more, nor was anything known of her till many years after Ferguson's death. From the short hints which have been left us on the subject, it appears that a nobleman, to whom she had become known at her father's lectures, took her in the first instance, to Italy, and then—but whether there or after their return to England is not stated—deserted her, in conformity with the general rule. She then applied to Garrick, who gave her a trial on the boards, but the attempt proved a failure. Agnes next tried authorship, but with no better success; after which, in despair, she threw herself upon the streets, and died miserably in Round Court, off the Strand, and it was upon her deathbed that she disclosed to the surgeon who attended her the melancholy story of her career. From the localities in which she habitually moved, she must frequently have passed her relatives in the streets, though withheld by shame from making herself known, while they imagined her to be in some distant country, or in the grave.

At Llanelly, in South Wales, a man of property and respectable position, though not a gentleman, who had married, and become the father of two children, left his home suddenly without being observed by any of his neighbors, and all the inquiries made by his wife and relatives proved unavailing. The Welsh are an affectionate and, upon the whole, a romantic people, but the deserted wife was not romantic, so after waiting a certain number of years, in expectation of her husband's return, she listened to the wooing of another man, and married again. There was no poetry in her composition, neither was she, like Tennyson's Mrs Arden, driven to take this step by the fear of poverty for herself or her children. The truth was, the buxom Welsh-woman wanted a husband, and took one, having waited long enough, as she thought, for her first lord or master to come back, if he meant to come back at all. But though the wife thus gave proof of her want of faith in the husband of her youth, or else really believed him to be dead, the lost man had a sister much younger than himself, who, instead of sharing the wife's despair, regarded her second marriage as an act of vice, and always looked forward confidently to her brother's return. When he had been absent about eight years, however, a circumstance occurred which staggered even her confidence. A man in sailor's garb called upon her and related that he had brought a message from her dead brother—for that he was dead there was no doubt at all. The ship in which they had been together in the Pacific went to pieces on a coral reef, and all hands, he said, perished except himself. His life was saved by the accidental passage of a whaler, the crew of which, discerning a man upon the reef, lowered a boat, and took him on board. During the five years which had elapsed since that event, he had been a wanderer in America and elsewhere, and, in obedience to the locomotive instinct, he soon resumed the habits of his former life and disappeared from Llanelly. The story soothed the wife's conscience, and somewhat softened the asperity with which the female critics of the town spoke of her second nuptials.

Years again rolled on, and the missing John Williams was not only given up as a lost man, but almost forgotten. All who are familiar with the habits of the Welsh people know that in small towns and country villages they are in the habit, when they go out, of leaving their doors on the latch, locks and keys being thought almost superfluous. One fine day, towards the close of summer, when Mrs Williams, now Mrs Williams no longer, had gone forth with her husband and the two children (she had none by her second marriage) to enjoy a walk in the neighboring fields, John suddenly made his avatar at Llanelly, and going straight to his own house, lifted the latch, hung his hat on a peg in the passage, and then finding no one at home, went and sat on a window seat, whence he could command a view down the street, to watch for his wife. After a short time, he saw her and his two children coming towards the house in familiar conversation with a man whom, however, he had known from a boy. He sprang from his seat, and ran to the door to meet them. A romance writer might make something of the situation, and I leave it to the romance writer. When Mrs Williams saw her first husband emerging from the door, she forgot her second, and bounding forward, threw herself with a burst of tears into his arms, whilst honest Griffiths looked on in astonishment and wonder. The circumstances of their position were soon explained, and the question now was, who should have the wife? The matter was settled in this way: the men stood on either side of the woman, and it was agreed that, to whomsoever she should turn and give her hand, he should remain master of the situation. She decided in favor of Williams, the old love, though eclipsed for a while, remaining still the stronger in her heart. This appears to be the story upon which Mr Tennyson has based his poetical legend of Enoch Arden.

An anecdote related not long ago in the Times may be cited to prove, if any proof were needed, that women do not always show themselves unworthy of a man's faithful love. In a village in Somersetshire two lovers, possessing no means on which to live, agreed to separate, the man asking the woman to wait for him a certain number of years, after which she would be free, if she thought proper, to marry another man. She affirmed, however, that she would wait for him till death, and he went abroad. Several years later a gentleman returning by train from London found a fellow-companion in the carriage whose complexion and manner excited his curiosity. He was swarthy and sunburned, in the full vigor of manhood and strength, but excited and uneasy, with a wandering eye and twitching features, especially when they entered Somersetshire. At length he found it impossible to preserve silence, and asked the gentleman if he knew a certain village near Taunton.

"I live there," was the reply, "and I am just returning to it from town."

"Then," said the young man, with difficulty restraining his emotion, "do you know such a one," mentioning a young woman's name.

"Yes, perfectly well."

"Is she—" and he could get no further.

"Married, you would ask," said the gentleman. "No, she is waiting for her lover who has gone abroad."

"That's me," exclaimed the man with enthusiasm. "Thank God, she has waited for I am come back to marry her."

The sequel may be left to conjecture.

A friend of mine living with his wife at a seaport town had made the acquaintance of a gentleman in the neighborhood about his own age, and so like him in form and feature that he might at any time be mistaken for the other. The resemblance was in fact so complete that when the men stood side by side it was difficult to determine in what point the likeness failed. Of this curious circumstance the country gentleman took advantage after the following manner. Calling upon my friend one Friday evening, he said he wished him in the course of the following day to take a passport for himself from the French Consul, and then hand it over to him. "I want to astonish the folks here," he said, "but could not do so if I took the passport myself and in my own name." Suspecting nothing wrong, my friend did as he was requested; the fabricator of astonishment on that same evening passed over into France, and in the course of a few days his reasons for disappearing came to light: he had committed forgery to an immense amount, and his disappearance from England was final. After crossing the channel no one knew in what direction he traveled, what name he assumed, to what country or manner of life he betook himself. He had friends, many friends who loved him dearly in spite of his transgressions, but they went on living from youth to age without obtaining the slightest hint of what had befallen their relative, who may still be doing penance on the banks of the Ohio or the Susquehanna for the wrong he perpetrated in youth.

It is well known that in France before the Revolution the vanishing of men almost before the eyes of their friends was so common that it scarcely excited any surprise at all. The only inquiry was, had he a beautiful wife or daughter, for in that case the explanation was easy: some one who had influence with the government had designs upon the lady, and made interest to have her natural guardian put out of the way while those designs were being fulfilled. A lettre de cachet effected the purpose in view for any number of months or years, or, if necessary, for life; and the individual thus spirited away, should his concealment be transient, was generally careful to treat the affair as a jest, lest his fate should be made to resemble that of the great state prisoner, a part of whose adventures are well known, though his identity has never been ascertained, for the conjectures of Lord Dover and others carry with them their own refutation.

Russia is still what France, and still more Italy, were formerly, the land of mystery, that is, for—the words are generally synonymous—of crime.

DR. J. C. YOUNG,
Medical and Surgical
INSTITUTE.

 CONSULTATION IN ALL CASES FREE.

 CURES GUARANTEED, OR NO PAY REQUIRED.

 IN ALL CASES WHERE CONFIDENCE IS REQUIRED, THE UTMOST SECRECY MAINTAINED.

The above rules, established by Dr. J. C. Young in 1850, and which have done so much to secure the reputation of this Institute, are still adhered to, affording those in need of medical aid, the certainty of cure and the utmost confidence.

There is nothing of so great importance to the sick as to know where to find a physician whose skill and humanity give assurance of proper and delicate treatment. The Doctor would respectfully call the attention of those of both sexes who are suffering or in trouble to the invariable success that has marked the career of this Institute in the seventeen years of its existence.

It is unnecessary in this connection to enumerate all the complaints treated at the Institute, but the Doctor feels it his duty to call especial attention to that terrible scourge,

SEMINAL WEAKNESS,

That is sapping with its insidiousness the very life of its victims; in the treatment and cure of which the Institute has earned so enviable a reputation.
